The New Change Management Ideal: Reflective Leadership

“In the knowledge society (and, economy), managers must be willing to abandon everything they know. They will have to acquire new knowledge every four or five years or they will become obsolete.” Peter Drucker, The New Society of Organizations.

As leaders, we must challenge ourselves with this question: “Do I have the adaptive capacity to be a new and competitive leader in the knowledge society?” Join us for some of the answers. This conference will afford you with:

- Specific and tangible tools to manage change, entrenchment, and barriers to high performance.
- An opportunity to build on cultural competence and the competence of those stakeholders that they must engage, inspire, and manage.
- A keener sense of their own management style, and the degree to which this style influences their capacity for performance.

Who Should Attend

Anyone who is involved in the education and development of adults: full and part-time adult educators, trainers, board members, supervisors, senior managers, anyone who wants to reflect and build on their management capacity and effectiveness.

Keynote Speaker — Sheila Maguire

Sheila Maguire is Director of Working Ventures of Public Private Ventures, with responsibility for Working Ventures, an initiative aimed at improving the practice of workforce development by creating accessible reports on effective practice and offering training workshops and conferences. In this capacity, Ms. Maguire works in various cities with practitioners from community based organizations and community colleges, to increase their effectiveness in delivering workforce development services.

Presenter on Reflective Leadership - Eric Rosenbaum

Eric Rosenbaum is the Senior Director of Staff Development at BEGIN Managed Program. He served as Assistant Director of the Bronx Community College Adult Literacy/BEGIN Program for thirteen years and has taught in several adult basic education programs, continuing education programs and colleges. Join him in this interactive reflective leadership workshop to learn how your style of leadership impacts your communication style.

Stress Less

Studies have shown stress to be a leading cause of many health problems. This session will offer valuable stress management activities such as proper breathing, massage therapy and aromatherapy. Techniques to sooth the psyche, relax your body and renew your spirit will be offered.

Leadership Conference Facilitator - Lou Miceli

Lou Miceli is the Executive Director and founder of the Workforce Professionals Training Institute (WPTI), a non-profit training and professional development intermediary in New York City. He provides organizations and leadership consultation to the non-profit, education and private sectors. In his capacity at WPTI, Mr. Miceli helps the workforce development and adult education fields connect performance theory to best practices.
